

Council of students

do my homework math

Most people belonging to ineffective stakeholders are members of the Students in order to either communicate once again with friends or make new friends. Some join in order to then boast of friends "... Yes, I was chosen by the chairman of the Student Council here." Such "chairmen" is proud of their position. However, as the great Chinese sage of Confucius said "... Do not read on the laurels, and think about the people of yours."

All this is called imitation of work. All initiatives in such student counters are not coming from students, but from the leadership of the university. Meetings become a banal formality, a waste of time. Everyone is well aware that you can only dream about productive work. Duck can reduce this cost of expenses in the budget of the educational institution and not to create soap bubbles? In the end, you can declare to all that this is a relic of the past and with this you need to fight, so to speak, to introduce innovations (this word has now become very fashionable from our country's leadership).

However, this is not a way out of the situation. By abolishing one at least a bad, but the support of the university, the whole educational institution sprawl. The effect of domino so to speak. Therefore, such a policy is unacceptable for the leadership of the university. It is necessary to approach this problem with creative. Here most likely it is appropriate to use the concept of "reorganization of the Student Council>".

Example. Take a typical embarrassing student. Work there always goes measured, without special initiatives, sluggishly, dying ... in the 70s. The XX century members of the same Student Council (those students who studied at the time) were nominated and implemented the initiative about the annual organization of the exhibition of decorative and applied products made by students. In those days, such exhibitions walked with a bang, collected the crowd of spectators.

Let's come back today. In the yard of 2011 - the year of nanotechnologies, Wi-Fi, Yota, social networks, 3D, the time of American culture. But the idea with the exhibition is alive to this day. And this exhibition is organized by members of the student council from year to year. Only the question: who goes to such exhibitions? Grandmothers - Wakes or Storam in a night shift?

Probably it should be obvious that in our time, decorative-applied art is not as common as in Soviet times :) The attendance level of such exhibitions falls from year to year, the leadership of the university is displeased with the work of the student council. It happens in most cases. But from this situation you can make a successful project.

Suppose, since people from Soviet times have people to organize exhibitions, then make these exhibitions interesting for students! Students and are created in order to make student life more interesting. Therefore, we offer you the following option to exit this situation.

We will call it conditionally "change of the river." First you need to find out what students are interested in. For this, the chairman of the Student Council should be given a disposal of a member of the Council to conduct a study of students' interests or called marketing research. To do this, you can hand out questionnaires with various issues. Then, by collecting all the necessary information, create a suitable "product". In our case, an interesting exhibition.

So, on the dressing, we can tell you that the modern student is interested in 3 main things:

- 1) Internet;
- 2) how to make money;
- 3) Love.

As can be seen, only the first item differs from the samples of the Soviet Union. Interests are the same. But with modern color. Therefore, based on the well-known facts, we would recommend this Student Council to arrange an exhibition that unites all these things. In the description of the exhibition you can write the following:

"You are a student and you have no money? You can not fully work or do you just be lazy to work? You can't buy your beloved girl even a bouquet of flowers on March 8 due to lack of money? But you have the opportunity to sit on the Internet every day and you constantly use it? Then come to the exhibition on the 22nd and find out how sitting at home, make money on the Internet! After visiting this exhibition, you will learn where the modern Bill Geacet make money. "
